

David Shepley
United States
Student
Columbia University

David ('15) is a senior at Columbia University studying sustainable development and economics. In early 2019, David spent three months in Kenya with Columbia and Princeton where he conducted field research on topics in sustainability and tropical biology. He is currently focused on developing his photographic and written portfolios exploring wildlife, culture and the intersection of community and conservation. In addition, he is pursuing opportunities in conservation management, interning for Lewa Wildlife Conservancy. David hopes to continue focusing on organizations that employ a community-driven approach to wildlife conservation. David served as a TA in 2017 and 2018.
